Pioneer, Prospector and Defender Against Morgan's Raid Celebrates 100th Birthday

Last Man of Governor Todd's "Squirrel Hunters" Talks Freely of His Life When Interviewed by an Alumnus of a Younger Generation

By WARD CONAWAY, '33x

SON of early white pioneers . . . college man . . . gold prospector in 1859 . . . Civil War army mule breaker . . . only surviving member of the "squirrel hunters" who defended Southern Ohio from General John Morgan's raid in 1862 . . . father at 78 years . . . farmer and contractor . . . from 100 years of an active life for Edward Naret Ridgeway, of Harrisburg, Gallia County, who passed the century mark Nov. 6, 1933.

A vegetarian and temperate man, Mr. Ridgeway remains quite active today, doing chores about his residence. Friends state that he celebrated his ninety-ninth birthday a year ago, by building a rail fence. Vividly, the centenarian recalled the highlights of his life when interviewed. Partial impairment of his vision troubles Mr. Ridgeway but slightly.

Several hundred relatives and friends from Ohio, West Virginia, Illinois, Indiana, and Pennsylvania, were present at anniversary services held for him at the Harris Baptist Church, all day on his anniversary. Prof. C. O. Clark, of Rio Grande College, presided.

Edward Naret Ridgeway was born November 6, 1833, in a log cabin which burned and was later replaced by a brick structure about a mile north of Rio Grande, on State Route 11. His parents were Mr. and Mrs. William Ridgeway, his father having come to Chillicothe in 1803, the year Ohio became a state. The centenarian's grandfather, David Ridgeway, was from South Carolina.

His birthplace was located on the post road between Gallipolis and Chillicothe, and it is presumed that the residence was also a tavern. Even as late as 1833, few pioneers resided as far from the Ohio River as Rio Grande.

Later the Ridgeway family moved, but their home has always been in the immediate neighborhood of Rio Grande and Harrisburg.

Mr. Ridgeway remembers the call to arms of soldiers for the Mexican War. As a youth of 21 years, he attended Ohio University, in 1854, for one year, where he was a classmate of the late John McCormick, a congressman from the Tenth Ohio District.

Lure of the gold rush to Leadville, Colo., in 1859, called Mr. Ridgeway, and he spent two years there gold prospecting and keeping a ranch for horses and oxen of other prospectors. "I returned with less money than I had when I started for Leadville," he commented.

Returning from the West in 1861, he was commissioned by the commanding officer at Cincinnati to lasso young mules and to serve as a mule breaker for the Union Army at the military camp at Mulberry Post Office, a few miles from the city.

Mr. Ridgeway was at the army post when General John Morgan crossed the Ohio River at Cincinnati, and burned the unit's wagons at the post. By the time Morgan had reached this section of Ohio, Mr. Ridgeway had enlisted as a "squirrel hunter," and was a member of that band of Ohioans which was summoned by Governor Todd to defend Southern Ohio against the invaders.

The group was enlisted for approximately 13 days in September, 1862. Mr. Ridgeway was stationed at Pt. Pleasant, W. Va. He was dismissed at Washington C. H. His honorary discharge is signed by Governor Todd, and was issued after the Civil War was over.

Since that time, Mr. Ridgeway has farmed and contracted as a bridge builder for the county, his home having always been located near Harrisburg.

Married three times, he was a father at 78 years. His third wife, Mrs. Pearl Wood Ridgeway, was married to him when she was 31 years of age, and he 71 years.

Mr. Ridgeway's parents lived to be past 80 years of age, as did several of his relatives. "My uncle bathed every day of his life and lived to be 84. My father never bathed, as far as I can remember, and also lived to be 84 years of age. I guess baths make no difference," Mr. Ridgeway chuckled during the interview. His mother died when 84 years old, as the result of a broken hip.

A sister, Permelia Atwood, founded Rio Grande College. His brother, Augustus, was a Civil War veteran, and the residence of the latter's widow is near Harrisburg.

Mr. Ridgeway eats sparingly. His diet consists principally of bran flakes, milk, fruit, and rice. He does not drink, but chews tobacco, a habit which he has possessed since his youth. Mr. Ridgeway expressed a dislike for automobile rides. However, he declared he had a desire to ride in an airplane after his one-hundredth birthday.

He has four children living: Mrs. Ollie Rawson, of Des Moines, Iowa; Mrs. Jessie Wells, of Indianapolis, (Continued on page 6)

Greetings from the Little Island Empire in The Orient Sent to Friends in the States

Japan of Today Is Not Japan of the Ages, Western Ways Having Taken Root in All Except Remote Places, Says Wife of Tokyo Coach

By MRS. GEORGE H. MARSHALL, '28

"SHIBARAKU" (greetings), my friends, from a tiny far-off country called Japan. To the geologist it may appear scarcely more than a dot of an island on this vast globe of ours; a mere speck of land nestling between two large continents. Yet, to the thinker and scholar, it ranks among the proudest and the mightiest of nations, large or small. It is towards the dreamer we must turn for a vision of the real Japan. He may listen wearily to his learned friends expounding upon the powers and strength of this tiny island nation and the so-called necessity of casting a wary eye towards the Orient. Yet prejudice or egotistical calculations disturb not the dreamer who seeks and finds beauty in truth.

World travelers near Japan's shores after many hours spent over guide books, information leaflets, and maps. Inexperienced tourists arrive with fleeting visions of dainty maids, parasols, and black, oval eyes. Yet there are others who approach Japanese ports with more than superficial impressions. This latter group, watching the winking shore lights from the deck of an ocean liner, has the wisdom to delve below the surface for that richer understanding so needed between the Orient and the Occident.

Let it be understood that no one justly could endeavor to belittle those surface beauties of Japan which glitter before the eyes of the transient visitors. Lovely beyond description is that majestic, snow-capped Mount Fuji, towering like a lone sentinel above a tiny nation. To see this glorious peak looming in the background against a golden sun a thousand times is but to appreciate it a thousand times more.

In the spring, when cherry trees on hill and vale, in city park and private gardens, all burst into shell-pink bloom, one wonders if such loveliness can be found elsewhere in the world. As lingering summer slowly dies and grey days approach, the falling leaf flutters to ground to nestle in a true profusion of fragrant chrysanthemums of all descriptions. Indeed these are but a few of the glories of nature—the beauties of surface—to be found nowhere else in such radiance and abundance as in Japan.

In addition to the natural wonders which so captivate the eye, there is a magic enchantment and charm in the beautiful shrines, temples, and Buddha images, pagan though they be. Still, there is an undeniable grandeur merging with the ways of the western world. Impassive and resigned as the Japanese may appear, there is still a melody of conflict in the ether in which the major notes of tragedy are relieved by the minor chords of joy.

Children depart from the customs and often from the homes of their parents, to live in steam-heated apartments. Doll-like Japanese girls forsake their exquisite kimonos for frocks from Paris and high heeled slippers. Venerable Japanese gentlemen unconsciously add a most humorous touch to this internal strife when they appear in their black silk kimonos, wearing the latest straw hats from Broadway. Through the laughter and tears of examples such as these, the Occidental friend cannot refrain from the earnest query, "Whither, Japan?"

The day has long passed since the traveler can find the Japan of the ages, except in the remote regions. Tokyo, the nation's capital, compares most favorably with any large American city. Taxis, street cars, and buses speed along its wide, paved avenues, while electric trains rumble overhead. Large department stores, theaters, city clubs, and numerous business firms "elbow" each other in the congested "down-town" districts. Picturesque Japanese houses now lie within the shadows of palatial foreign-style homes and countless modern apartments and hotels.

The tourist, seeking "Oriental atmosphere," finds modernism awaiting him even in more isolated places. In making trips to Nara or Nikke to visit ancient Buddha temples, one travels on speedy, modern steam or electric trains, equipped with excellent "diners" and observation cars. In front of the depots of even these far-flung places, there are taxis (with English speaking drivers) to escort the traveler to the hotel. There, with his private bath and telephone by his side,

Mrs. George H. Marshall (Josephine Marshall, '28, who married George Eisenbrey, '29, the latter taking her family name) has been in Japan for the past three years. Her husband is director of physical education at St. Paul's University in Tokyo. The university is an Episcopal institution which enrolls about 2500 Japanese men. Only the Imperial University excels it in size.

Two years ago Mr. Marshall, who was a letter-man in baseball and basketball at Ohio University, brought the St. Paul's University baseball team to the United States for an extended schedule of games with American schools, including Coach Marshall's alma mater. Mrs. Marshall accompanied her husband on the trip and was a campus visitor at that time.

which clings to these edifices, as they stand mute and unchanged through the shifting sands of time. Hail to the visitor and his enthusiasm and appreciation of these wonders.

However, the foreigners who make their homes beneath the shadow of Fujiyama (Mount Fuji) glimpse a nation which is even more interesting than that which the tourist admired. These "resident foreigners" observe a changing Japan, wherein a beloved ancestral civilization is slowly, slowly

DECEMBER, 1933

Entered as second class matter, October 3, 1927, at the Postoffice at Athens, Ohio, under the act of March 3, 1897.

Combined membership in the Ohio University Alumni Association and subscription to The Ohio Alumnus, $2.50 per year. Membership and subscription payable on October 1st each year.

Discontinuances—If any subscriber wishes his Alumnus discontinued at the expiration of his subscription, notice to that effect should be sent with the subscription, or at its expiration. Otherwise it is understood that a continuance is desired.

Remittances should be made by check or money order, payable to the order of the Ohio University Alumni Association, and mailed to the Association, Box 285, Athens, Ohio.

MERRY Christmas and a Happy New Year. It is altogether likely that this magazine, caught in the rush of holiday mail, will not be delivered until after the first part of the greeting has become obsolete, but all who read it will know that the Alumni Secretary has been thinking of his thousands of friends and constituents and wishing that he could make his message a distinctly individual and personal one.

TO A great many Ohio University men and women the season would be much merrier and the prospects of the coming year a bit happier if they could engage in some sort of remunerative work or be assured of a reasonable wage for work that they are engaged at already. Particularly is this true of alumni in the teaching profession. The situation that makes it necessary for thousands of public school teachers to serve for meager salaries and to wait months for the payment of them is, to say the least, deplorable. It is all the more deplorable because, to a great extent, it is unnecessary. The great wave of tax avoidance and tax delinquencies is but little short of criminal. So, too, is the dereliction of the state's law-making body which has failed to provide adequate support for one of the most fundamental and indispensable of all activities, the promotion of public education.

A movement on the part of teachers in sections of northern Ohio to organize, presumably for a militant advancement of their cause, has been noted. Heretofore the ethics and dignity of the profession have forbidden such an action. But just as cumulative evils in other fields have bred extreme and revolutionary measures so have increasing ills provoked this new movement in the ranks of teachers, and to us there seems to be more than a little justification for it. It is now a question of whether dignity and subservience to an ethical code, with empty stomachs, are to be preferred to less dignity and a greater degree of consideration from those who have it within their power to see that the teachers get a fair deal. Let us hope that, with sound judgment and under wise leadership, to avoid indiscretions which would cause a forfeiture of the respect of right-minded people, the teachers of Ohio and elsewhere will be able to effectively present their cases before those who are charged with the responsibility for the maintenance of the educational system.

WHEN recognitions come to the head of a house all of the members of the family are naturally pleased. Likewise, all alumni are pardonably proud when the head of their university is honored.

Honors and distinctions, academic and otherwise, are not new to Ohio University's president. He is known and respected by eminent men and women from one coast to the other. He has been called upon to address audiences in three-fourths of the states of the Union. In some states he has lectured in almost every county. His counsel has been sought by national administrative bodies and by the heads of state governments. It is not, therefore, because his most recent recognition is of a more signal nature than many others that have come to him, but because it is one more evidence of the esteem and regard in which he is held by his colleagues in the field of university administration, that we are pleased. President Bryan, as the new president of the National Association of State Universities, the alumni of Ohio University greet and congratulate you.

ONE YOUNG lady, a last year's member of the Alumni Association, recently said to a mutual friend (who tipped us off), "I'm going to hold up my membership check until I find out whether or not Clark Williams has any more of those clever notices up his sleeve." Well, to any others who may have similar notions Clark Williams says, "Thanks for the compliments, if such they were meant to be, but creditors of the association are not recognizing compliments as legal tender. It's contrary to the code, or something. Besides, each notice — whether clever or otherwise — costs money, and the secretary has no franking privilege at the postoffice. So, good friends, let's have those checks without waiting for the rest of the series. There may not be any rest."

THE FOOTBALL season is over. After the Rose Bowl spectacle in Pasadena a few days hence there will be but little thought of the gridiron sport in the minds of sports fans generally until next year. Occasional pestmortems and fire-side discussions will be indulged in but the moleskins are in the locker rooms for another year.

In drawing the curtain we want to congratulate the Bobcat coaches and players upon the showing of the past season. While the Buckeye crown was not returned to the Ohio campus, the accomplishments of the team were entirely up to pre-season expectations. The loss of veteran material suffered at commencement time last June seemed almost irreparable. Sophomores, as a consequence, were called upon to fill the gaps. Tried in the balance of fierce competition these new recruits were not found wanting. Next year . . . Anyway, next year is another year and we'll wait until it comes. — And win, lose, or draw Ohio University alumni will be with the Bobcats and their coaches.

On and About the Campus . . .

TWO former members of the Ohio University faculty returned to the campus recently to visit and address groups. The two were Dr. Ray Latham, president of Iowa State Teachers' College at Cedar Falls and Dr. Harry G. Good, professor of education at Ohio State University.

Predicting extreme changes in educational institutions and systems Doctor Good spoke before an open meeting of the Men's Faculty Club. Doctor Latham addressed the Athens Rotary Club.

FRIENDS of Dr. S. H. Bing, director of the Extension Division of the University, will be pleased to hear of his continued improvement in Holzer Hospital, Gallipolis. Doctor Bing, former president of Rio Grande College and a one-time member of the Ohio Assembly, was removed from his home to the hospital in November to undergo a serious operation and subsequent blood transfusion.

MORE than 50 members of the University faculty of Scandinavian ancestry met for a true Norwegian and Swedish dinner at the Women's Faculty Club on College street recently. A Scandinavian menu, native costumes, and folk lore combined to heighten the pleasure of the evening.

A German dinner to be given in a similar manner will be held at the Club Jan. 15. Dean Irma E. Voigt is chairman of the dinner.

SEVENTY alumni, actives, and guests of Beta Theta Pi commemorated the founding of the fraternity on the campus 92 years ago with a formal dinner at the Hotel Berry early last month. Dr. Francis W. Shephardson, national president of the fraternity, was the guest of honor and speaker of the occasion.

The Ohio University chapter is the second oldest of the fraternity and the oldest group on the local campus. The first vows of Ohio University Betas were taken by three youths in a room on the third floor of West Wing.

IN a very attractive setting, President and Mrs. Bryan received students who will graduate in February and June and members of the faculty and their wives, November 8, at the annual fall reception, in the Men's Union. Several hundred guests attended the reception. President Bryan also received parents of students in the foyer of Alumni Memorial Auditorium on Saturday forenoon of Dad's Day, Nov. 25.

THE remarkable record of winning the Men's Union scholarship award for the third time was recently achieved by William J. Burke, Lowellville, senior in chemistry.

Burke (see picture) won his first medal with 18 hours of straight "A" and the second and third with 19 hours of "A". In winning the award the last two times, he has been tied with William Cherrington, '33, Gallipolis, now studying law at the University of Michigan.

SPEAKING of the educational facilities and art of France, M. Desclos, internationally-known educator and assistant director of the National Education Bureau in Paris, twice addressed student audiences on Nov. 29. His evening lecture on "Paris, Center of Art," was given in French to L'Alliance Francaise in Fine Arts Hall.

OFFERING, as the first major production of the year, the first Bernard Shaw production to be given on the campus, the Experimental Theater gave "Candida," a three-act comedy, Dec. 13-14, in Ewing Auditorium. Six veteran student dramatists made up the cast of the play.

TWO distinguished men have recently presented informal lectures in student convocations. Thomas F. Lee, well-known explorer of South America, engineer, and banker, told of his experiences in Latin America, on Nov. 23, while Richard Halliburton fascinated a large audience, Dec. 14, with descriptions of his adventures in all parts of the world. Both are well known as authors and were delightful assembly speakers.

ACAST of freshman members of Y. W. C. A. presented the sparkling "A Bird's Christmas Carol," by Kate Douglas, which Alice Ruth Donley, '33, has arranged as a two-act play, Wednesday night, Dec. 20, in Alumni Memorial Auditorium.

A FAMILIAR landmark on the Ohio University campus was recently destroyed when workmen felled the old sycamore tree near Boyd Hall. Fear that serious injury might come to students from rotted limbs falling from the tree prompted the removal of the tree. Two small maples near Music Hall were removed because of diseased parts.

OHIO'S men debaters concluded the first part of their season by engaging in a novel tournament at Columbus late in December. Prof. L. C. Staats, '26, debate coach and assistant professor of speech and dramatic art, assisted in planning the tourney which closed the Ohio Conference schedule. The Buckeye Conference season will open soon.

Brother of Great Civil War General Graduated in 1830

This is the second of a series of "thumb-nail" sketches of the lives of early graduates of Ohio University.

CHARLES TAYLOR SHERMAN, A. B., 1830; A. M., 1833. Born in Norwalk, Conn., Feb. 3, 1811. Son of Judge Charles R. Sherman and Mary Hoyt Sherman, of Norwalk. Brother of General William Tecumseh Sherman and United States Senator John Sherman. Came to Lancaster, Ohio, when less than one year of age, his mother carrying him the entire distance on horseback.

Matriculated at Ohio University in 1827; graduated in 1830. Studied law under his uncle, Judge Jacob Park, A. B., 1816. Married Eliza Williams, of Dayton, in 1841. Practiced law in Mansfield until beginning of the Civil War.

Appointed by Governor Todd, Commandant of Mansfield Military Camp. Appointed by President Lincoln to settle War claims at St. Louis. Aided in building Sandusky, Mansfield, and Newark, and the Pittsburgh, Ft. Wayne and Chicago railroads. Selected as government director of the Union Pacific Railroad. Appointed by President Johnson, 1867, Judge of the Northern District of Ohio. Resigned in 1872.

One of his daughters married General Nelson A. Miles, of the United States Army. Another daughter married Senator J. D. Cameron, of Pennsylvania. He died in Cleveland, Jan. 1, 1879.

Dad's Day Program Is Success

Ohio University's eleventh annual Dad's Day, Nov. 25, was a busy and happy one, the success of which was rivaled only by one other special occasion this fall, the Homecoming event.

A large number of parents were present to enjoy and to participate in a well-filled program of entertainment features planned by the Men's Union in cooperation with the Independent League and the Alliance of Fraternity Presidents.

The program of one-act plays presented by the department of dramatic art, the band concert, President Bryan's informal reception for parents, the dad's day luncheon at Hotel Berry, the Ohio Wesleyan-Ohio U. game, and the Press Cotillion were all greatly enjoyed by the campus visitors whose unanimous opinion seemed to be that the 1933 Dad's Day was the biggest and best yet.

June Graduate Establishes Fine Record in Classroom

An Ohio University scholarship record of eleven years' standing was topped last June when Clifford L. Hughes, '33, Akron, missed a perfect, four-year, straight "A" record by the narrow margin of two "B" grades in gym work. The official score in the registrar's office credits him with 124 hours and 370 points.

Mr. Hughes, whose major was in economics, is now enrolled in the Graduate School at Yale University where he is continuing work in the subject of his major interest. He is a member of the Ohio University Phi Beta Kappa chapter.

The record which had gone unchallenged for more than a decade was held by Dr. Paul A. Belcher, '22, counsel for the First Central Trust Company, in Akron. Mr. Belcher, who received the degree of Doctor of Juridical Science at the Lake Erie School of Law in 1931, is credited at Ohio University with 124 hours and 368 points, a record which, at the time of its establishment, was considered almost unassailable. There was no "Phi Bete" chapter at Ohio University at the time of Mr. Belcher's graduation and under the rules of the local organization he will not be eligible for consideration until 1937.

President Bryan Elected

Dr. Elmer Burritt Bryan was elected president of the National Association of State Universities at a meeting of that organization in Chicago, Nov. 18. The association is made up of the heads of the country's state, tax-supported colleges and universities.

On November 9, in Ashland, President Bryan addressed a meeting of the Kentucky State Teachers' Association on "The Democratization of Education."

Arrangements Completed for University To Train Nurses

A course in nurse's training will be instituted at Ohio University under an arrangement with Grant Hospital in Columbus beginning next semester.

The course will enable women students to secure a bachelor of arts degree and the nursing certificate in one year less than would otherwise be required. Three years of foundation work in arts and sciences will be completed on the Ohio campus before the student continues in the Columbus hospital. The A. B. degree will be granted to persons satisfactorily completing the two years of work required in Columbus.

The completion of plans for nurse's training followed closely the approval of Ohio University by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists as a training school for laboratory technicians. An arrangement for work in the Holzer Hospital at Gallipolis, and the Athens State Hospital has been made for the latter curriculum. Ohio University is the only educational institution in the state to receive approval of the pathological society.

Pioneer Celebrates Birthday

Ind.; Elmer Ridgeway, of Jackson, and Edward Ridgeway, of Muncie, Ind. Two daughters, Miss Hattie Ridgeway, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Lou, the daughter born when he was 78 years old, died about two years ago.

All of his living children except Mrs. Rawson, were present at his birthday celebration.

An effort is being made to have Mr. Ridgeway awarded a special pension for his services as a "squirrel hunter," by the next session of the Ohio Legislature. No application for a veteran's pension was made by Mr. Ridgeway until he was past 95 years old.

A staunch Republican, he has voted for every President since Millard Fillmore, having falsified his age to be able to vote, Mr. Ridgeway stated. On the day after his one hundredth birthday he voted in the November election at a polling place near his home.

Lewis C. Davis, '32, Jackson, who majored in economics at Ohio University, is enrolled in Harvard University for graduate work.

Our Bobcats Finish Buckeye Grid Season in Third Place, the Lowest in Several Years

By CHARLES A. DENSMORE, '32

THE FINAL Bobcat football drive took an ironical twist near the end of the season. Ten minutes before the final gun of the final game it looked as though Ohio University would close its Buckeye Conference season without having its goal line crossed.

Then an Ohio Wesleyan player, one John Turley, who had been severely injured a few weeks before, entered the game in an attempt to save the Bishops from complete rout at the hands of an up-and-at-'em Ohio team. He began to toss passes here and there with the result that the Bishops threw a real scare into the Ohioans and scored twice in quick succession just before the game ended. The Pedenmen, however, finished the Dad's Day encounter on the long end of 19-13 score.

After handing Wittenberg their worst defeat by an Ohio team in a number of years, 39-0, on Nov. 4, the Green and White aggregation looked forward to the encounter with Marshall College of Huntington on Armistice Day as a fairly easy afternoon's work, but an inspired Bison team and the Huntington crowd thought otherwise. The result was a scoreless tie, a moral victory for the conference newcomers, and an awakening to the fact that John Zontini was one of the toughest backs to stop that an Ohio eleven had ever encountered.

The week following, Nov. 18, when the Bearcats of the University of Cincinnati eked out a 2-0 victory, it became quite apparent that the scoreless tie with the Thundering Herd would rob Ohio of a share in the Buckeye banner. Miami would probably upset the Kingmen on Thanksgiving Day, which it did after a thrilling contest, and Ohio was left holding the bag, or third place, whichever you prefer. The Bobcats were superior to Cincinnati in yardage and downs, but points are still winning ball games. Two magnificent stands by the Bearcats enabled them to share in the trophy and to defeat Ohio for the first time in ten years. The final standing in the Buckeye was: Miami and Cincinnati tied for first place (in which case no second place is awarded); Ohio University third; Ohio Wesleyan, fourth; Marshall, fifth; and Wittenberg, sixth.

With little favor for alibis and post-mortems, let us conclude by saying that the 1933 Bobcat squad was a fine one, carrying on the prestige of the fighting men from Athens and doing their best for their coach and school. Eighteen players received letters and nine men played their last college football. The last echo of the season was heard in the University Grill Wednesday night, Dec. 13, when the annual football banquet was held.

A LARGE assortment of distinctions were given Ohio players in "all-team" selections following the close of the season. Most prominent among the honors paid were those given Woody Wills, Columbus sophomore quarterback, and Bill Snyder, senior tackle. Both of these men were picked on the Associated Press and United Press All-Buckeye first teams, while the same two divided honors in the same selections for All-Ohio.

With Wills placing on the first team of the Associated Press and Snyder on the second, these two men were also accorded a position among the honorable mention All-American by the same organization. In addition to this duo, Pete Stephan, Sidney center, was named on the first team of the United Press and Walter Priode, Middleport guard, on the Associated Press vote. Both of these men are juniors and will have another chance to gain honors next fall.

COACH "BUTCH" GROVER'S 1934 basketball machine, reconditioned from the one which earned a share of the Buckeye Conference title last year, could not get to running smoothly Dec. 12, when the Bobcats were upset by the Bliss College five, 23-20, in the initial game here.

With Grover's old spark plug, Bernard Berens, elongated center, from Lancaster, scoring but 10 points against 22 made in the same game last year, and only one new player showing on the floor during the contest, the Bobcats' chances in the conference race are still problematical. More drill and greater experience is needed before the floormen will be ready for the dizzy pace promised in the Buckeye league this year.

Grover has a right to sing the blues with Lackey, Saunders, Brown, Mills, and Doll all leaving him last year. The havoc caused by graduation left Berens and Perk Reichley, New Lexington guard, as surviving lettermen. The remainder of Ohio's prospects this season rests with some experienced men of last year and a few, very few, promising sophomores.

Among the newcomers, Bill Schmidt, Columbus, who performed so creditably on the football field this fall, looks about the best. He has a good eye and is a fairly good defensive guard. Other sophomores are George May, Ashtabula; Woody Wills, Columbus; Bob Herriek and Bill Wipfler, Elmira, N. Y.; Al Merendino, Clarksburg, W. Va.; James Russell, Stewart; Howard Moon, Warren; Kimler Boyer, Cortland; Paul Samuell, Zanesville; Robert Petty, Marietta; and Larry Swackhammer, Laurelville.

Varsity men who saw action last season and who will carry the bulk of Ohio's attack this year are Sammy Siegel, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Ed Byham, Meadville, Pa.; Roy George, Canton; and Bill Fogelsong, Mason, W. Va.

Pre-Game Grid Dinners Among Recent Alumni Group Affairs

Well in advance of the usual spring rally of alumni activities four reunions have already been held and a fifth is contemplated as an event of the Christmas holiday season.

A dinner meeting at the Huntington Hotel served as a "prelude" to the Ohio-Marshall football game in the West Virginia city on Armistice Day. The reunion was a delightful affair attended by twenty alumni.

Dean E. W. Chubb was the honor guest and speaker of the occasion. Featuring the program, also, were the singing of university songs and an exceedingly clever impersonation by Charles E. Booth, a Huntingtonian, of an inebriated football fan who crashed the dinner looking for Coach Don Peden. So realistic was Booth's performance that the Alumni Secretary earnestly requested the management to "throw him out."

Officers of the Huntington chapter for the past year were Russell L. May, '25, president, and Ruth Farrar, '25, secretary. New officers elected last month are Miss Farrar, president, and Lena L. Roe, '25, secretary.

One week later, Nov. 17, the Cincinnati chapter, under the leadership of Oris E. Hamilton, '25x, and Ilo Feurt, '27, was called together at the Cincinnati Club for a dinner in honor of Ohio's gridiron coaches Don Peden and Bill Trautwein and Athletic Director O. C. Bird who were in town for the varsity fracas with the University of Cincinnati grid squad the next day.

Appropriately chosen were the miniature footballs which served as dinner favors and place cards. Responses from Director Bird and Coaches Peden and Trautwein were elicited by Mr. Hamilton, who acted as toastmaster. Music for the occasion was provided by a Cincinnati accordionist.

The sixty-one members present were unanimous in the action taken to retain Mr. Hamilton and Miss Feurt in office as president and secretary, respectively, of the chapter.

Green cellophane baskets tied with white ribbon and filled with candy, together with white chrysanthemums, gave color to the tables for the luncheon, Nov. 25, at the Women's City Club, which was attended by sixty members of the Youngstown Ohio University Women's Club.

Frances Wirt, accompanied by Mrs. Fred Evans, contributed two very pleasing vocal numbers. Mrs. R. B. Poling (Ruth Hall, '13, 2-yr.) presided at a brief business meeting, after which bridge was the order of the afternoon.

Mrs. W. H. Heller (Thora Carlson, '21, 2-yr.) was chairman of the luncheon committee which included Mrs. Myrtle Baker, Mrs. George Chambers, Mrs. H. B. Doyle, Grace Baker, Mrs. G. E. Roudebush, and Isabel Bacon.

A report of the meeting held last month in Lima is, unfortunately, missing. It is safe to assume, however, that the wide-awake Lima group, whose meetings are always lively, enjoyed another one of their peppy reunions.

On December 29, Ohio University alumni and undergraduates living in the Wheeling-Martins Ferry-Bellaire district will get together for a dance at the Air Castle, in Wheeling, the music to be furnished by Charles Dunaway and his Broadcasting Orchestra.

The dance is distinctly an Ohio University affair (guests of Ohioans are of course welcome) and is being sponsored by a committee headed by Allan E. Bundy, '32. The proceeds of the dance, it is announced, will be used to aid in a rejuvenation of the Ohio Valley alumni chapter. For further information, Ohioans are requested to communicate with Mr. Bundy whose address is: % The Martins Ferry Times, Martins Ferry, Ohio.

Accepts Government Position

John W. McBride, '28, has recently resigned his position as head of the economics department at Ohio Northern University to accept a position in Washington, D. C., as a tariff expert in the National Industrial Recovery Administration.

Mr. McBride, a major in economics and a Phi Beta Kappa man on the Ohio University campus, received his master's degree from Princeton University and has now completed all requirements but the thesis for a doctorate.

Eileen Fitzsimmons, '33, is employed in the credit department of the Ohio Power Company in her home city, Steubenville.

New National Magazine To Be Published by Ohio Graduates

Flola Shepard, '19, Mary Lawhead, '26, and John Rood, '26x, are the editors of a new national literary magazine, MANUSCRIPT. In the prospectus of the publication, the editors say: "There are many good writers in America who have little chance of gaining the attention of regular commercial magazines, but whose work is of such fine quality that it deserves publication. The aim of MANUSCRIPT is to give these writers a hearing. In the past few years, it has been proved many times that the best writing is not usually found in the pages of the magazines which pay the highest rates and which have the widest circulation. Many of the authors, whose work finally reaches these commercial publications, have first gained attention through the effort of some little magazine." To prove this assertion, the editors mention such important writers as Ernest Hemingway, Sherwood Anderson, Erskine Caldwell, William Faulkner, Katherine Mansfield, D. H. Lawrence, and many others, who — because of their frankness or the unusual treatment of stories — aroused no interest in commercial publications until after they had established themselves through the efforts of courageous literary magazines. MANUSCRIPT hopes to give writers of this generation the same assistance that these authors received.

The first issue, which comes out on January 10th, will contain, among other things, an article by Zona Gale and one by Erskine Caldwell; stories by Alfred Morang, Frederick Scribner, Beulah Roberts Childers, Warren Bower, Clyde Robertson; poems by H. Nelson Hooven, head of Ohio University's Fine Arts Department, Edna Ervin, '31, and others.

The editors will be pleased to receive short stories and poems from Ohio University alumni for consideration.

The price of MANUSCRIPT is 25c a copy, or $1.50 for a year's subscription. All mail should be addressed to MANUSCRIPT, Box 467, Athens, Ohio.

Harold LeFavor, '32 (B. M.), '33 (B. S. in Ed.), one of the twins, is teaching music in the schools at Pennsville, Chesterhill, and Stockport. Carroll LeFavor, '32 (B. M.), the other twin, will complete work for the B. S. in Ed. degree next spring.

Here and There Among the Alumni

On November 1, a new commercial advertising agency known as Carr Liggett, Inc., was opened in Cleveland at 1006 Leader Building. The man behind the plate glass door, as indicated by the name thereon, is Carr Liggett, '16, a former partner and founder of The Krichbaum-Liggett Co. Advertisers desiring clever ideas will do well to correspond with this versatile Cleveland "before buying." ("Not one cent was paid for this advertisement." — Editor.)

Janet C. Bing, '33, daughter of Dr. S. H. Bing, director of the Ohio University Extension Division, is enrolled as a Fellow in the Graduate School of Applied Social Science in Western Reserve University. She is also doing case work for one of the Cleveland welfare agencies. Miss Bing was forced to take time out this fall for the removal of an incorrigible appendix.

BING, '33

Mrs. F. W. Berry (Janice Hahn, '22), is now living in Bond Hill, Cincinnati, after periods of residence in Akron and San Antonio, Texas. Mrs. Berry's husband is associated with the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

Dean of Women Edna Arundel, '21, of Rio Grande College, was elected president of the Women Teachers' Division of the Southeastern Ohio Education Association at a meeting of the body in Jackson, Oct. 26. She had previously served as vice-president one year and as secretary two years. Before going to Rio Grande, where she is head of the teacher training department as well as dean of women, Miss Arundel had been head of the Lawrence County normal school and later head of a similar school in Scioto county.

George M. Brown, '31, all-Buckeye center in 1930, was an interested spectator at the Ohio Wesleyan-Ohio U. game at Ohio Stadium on Nov. 25. George is a senior in the law school at Western Reserve University and is also an assistant coach of the Reserve grid team. Besides renewing many acquaintances he scouted the Wesleyan Bishops whom his team met in a Thanksgiving Day encounter.

A 15-page booklet written and copyrighted by F. D. Forsyth, '11, entitled "Your Bank Explained," has recently come from The Lawhead Press. Not only a practical banker but a student of banking, Mr. Forsyth, cashier of The Bank of Athens, N. B. A., has crowded a lot of valuable information into brief chapters under such headings as "How Banks Are Organized," "Duty of the Bank," "Some Duties of the Depositor," "How Deposits Are Loaned," etc. While the editor is not authorized to say so he presumes that a copy of the booklet will be available for anyone who requests it.

On Nov. 1, 1933, Dr. O. L. Dustheimer, '13, of Baldwin-Wallace College, gave his 100th radio lecture on astronomical subjects over Cleveland's station WTAM. Dr. Dustheimer's 1933-34 schedule calls for addresses over WTAM on the first day of every month from September to June, inclusive. The hour is 6 p. m., E. S. T.

This year a similar series of lectures by the Baldwin-Wallace professor is being introduced by Ohio State University to be broadcast over the university station, WOSU. These addresses are given about the middle of each month.

"Dear Clark: . . . Last spring we moved into a little bungalow and enjoy it so very much, although we have spent very little time at home this summer. We have spent many week-ends up north in the woods fishing in some of our beautiful lakes and streams. 'Tus' plans to spend a week in the Big Woods this fall game hunting, and by what the guides tell us, there are a lot of deer and bear there this year." The letter was signed by Carolyn (Christy) Covert, '30, whose husband, Marlette C. Covert, '29, a Harvard Business School graduate, is employed by New England Industries, Inc., (Textile Division) in the treasurer's office of the Bates, York, Hill, Edwards, and Androscooggin textile mills.

Prof. B. A. Walpole, '15, director of vocational agricultural education at Michigan State College manages to keep himself busy in spare moments by lecturing and writing. During five weeks in September and October he engaged in a lecture tour which took him into seven states. He is writing on an average of one book a year, his latest, "Units in Living Science," appearing in August. The publishing company has recently advised Professor Walpole that over 20,000 copies of the new book had been sold in Michigan alone.

Lucille Cutler, who graduated in music in 1931, and who secured a master's degree in sociology last June, is studying at the Westminster Choir School at Princeton, N. J. During the summer of 1932 she was a piano student with Carl Lamson, one-time accompanist for Fritz Kreisler. An Associated Press news item from Princeton under date of Dec. 12, says: "The Westminster Choir sang for Dr. Albert Einstein today and the great German scientist wept with pleasure."

As this magazine goes to press the ninth annual circuit exhibition of the Ohio Water Color Society, usually displayed only in large centers, is on display in the art gallery of the Edwin Watts Chubb Library on the Ohio University campus. Mrs. Rush Elliott (Frances Gray, '26), Athens, former Ohio University art instructor whose diploma for the master's degree bears her alma mater's seal, has four compositions in the exhibit, the greatest number of pictures that one person is permitted to exhibit. The selections were made by a jury of art critics. Mrs. Elliott's picture, "Magnolias," was adjudged one of the four best of the entire exhibit. The artist is the wife of Dr. Rush Elliott, '24, associate professor of anatomy at Ohio University.

The new mayor of Stratton, Ohio, is none other than Delbert Nixon, president of the class of 1933 and well known on the university campus for his political activities. Nixon won the five-cornered Stratton race for mayor by two votes. Two years ago he lost by the same margin.

Henry Corradini, '33, former relief worker in Athens and Belmont counties, has been appointed relief director for Meigs county by District Supervisor Dayton H. Frost, '30, and Major E. O. Braught of the State Relief Commission. "Hank" was a stellar Bobcat athlete playing quarterback on last year's football team and second base on the baseball team.

O. E. McClure, '16, associate professor of electrical engineering and physics at Ohio University, was notified this fall of his election as a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr. J. A. Place, '13, of the faculty of the University of Texas Medical School, located at Galveston, writes: "Do you know that Dr. J. William Buchanan, '13, and Dr. Esther Greisheimer, '14, have each placed a book in circulation in the past year?" Author Buchanan (Ph. D.) is associate professor of zoology at Northwestern University. Author Greisheimer (Ph. D., M. D.) is associate professor of physiology at the University of Minnesota.

Mark Cowen, '22, city recreational director of Roanoke, Va., was one of a number of alumni who have been called to Athens, or to homes elsewhere, in recent months upon the sad errand of attending the funeral of a parent or other close relative. Mr. Cowen came for the obsequies of his aged grandfather, Jerry Grim, Burlington, who died Dec. 10 in the home in which he had been married 68 years previously. Five grandchildren of the deceased are Ohio University graduates: Dr. Blaine R. Goldsberry, '14, Russell Goldsberry, '17, Mary Frances Goldsberry Blair, '28, Mark Cowen, '22, and Ted Cowen, '29.

Other deaths in alumni families:

Rev. L. L. Cherrington, ' Cincinnati, father of Prof. Homer V. Cherrington, '14; Edith Cherrington, '15; Jessie Cherrington, '29; and Rowena Cherrington Vaughn, '23.

Mrs. George H. Junod, Athens, mother of Grace Junod Boykin, '11; Carrie Junod Kirby, '14, and Rose Junod Loeh, '19.

Samuel M. Eccles, Fairmont, W. Va., father of Dr. Charles M. Eccles, '14, and Henry H. Eccles, '15

Noted Psychologist Killed In Indiana Motor Accident

Dr. Mary H. Young, '16, noted psychiatrist, was killed instantly November 24 when she was thrown from an automobile as it rolled down an embankment three miles north of Martinsville, Ind. Death resulted from a fractured skull.

Mrs. Young, director of the Herman H. Young Foundation, at Indianapolis, and also a director of the psychological clinic at Butler College, was a companion of Dr. J. Louis Rosenstein of the department of education at Butler. While enroute from Bloomington to Indianapolis Mr. Rosenstein lost control of the car and it hurtled down a steep declivity at the roadside. The driver suffered bruises and shock but was not seriously injured.

Mrs. Young's home was formerly in North Canton, Ohio. Her husband, Dr. Herman H. Young, '13, died Feb. 21, 1931.

Dr. Mary H. Young became director of the Herman H. Young Foundation, a psychological clinic in Indianapolis, when the organization was founded immediately after the death of her husband who had attained a national reputation for his studies in child psychology.

Doctor Young received her master's and doctor's degrees from the University of Pennsylvania. She spent several years as a child psychologist in Youngstown, Ohio, before going to Bloomington where she was employed as a research worker in the field of school attendance and later was appointed director of special education at Indiana University, a position she held until 1927. Upon the death of Dr. H. H. Young she was appointed director of the psychological clinics of Indiana University, at Bloomington, and at the university medical center in Indianapolis. She was also psychological consultant for Eli Lilly & Co.

Greetings From Japan

the puzzled visitor settles down in the unexpected comforts of home — still searching for but not finding the old Japan.

Yet, despite this invasion of Occidental culture, far below the surface of mock customs and appearances lies the true Japan. Those of us who have sought and found this tangible land, face the greatest disappointment of all: in that we realize our inability to understand. The Oriental, with all of his fine and interesting characteristics, will always be the incomprehensible Oriental. We may know him and undoubtedly admire him, but we never fully understand him. So it is with both individual and nation.

The weary yet pleased tourist may sail away from these shores with the parting remark, "So like America, after all." But many of us, with longer contacts with the Orient and Japan in particular, do not agree. Instead, we recognize and strive to overcome the difference between the Orient and the Occident. We hail with enthusiasm the growing interchange in commerce, and the advancing good-will among races. Yet within the secret chambers of our hearts we know there is a definite and perpetual gap—a marked difference in the psychology of Orient and Occident—which shall prove to be the obstacle mountain.

As friends and well-wishers we shall continue to grope in the darkness of the impossible; only to circle back at least to a slightly enlightened understanding of "East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet."

George J. Wetherholt, Gallipolis, father of Capt. Paul Wetherholt, '20; and Frank Wetherholt, '22x.

Mrs. Emma Keenan, Athens, mother of Louise Hancher Slabaugh, '13; and Robert Keenan, '26x.

Homer A. Goddard, Sr., Wellston, father of Homer A. Goddard, Jr., '24x; and Charles H. Goddard, '27.

Hugh Meighen, Athens, father of Audrey Meighen, '22; and Freda Meighen, '20x.

Arthur A. Wolfe, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., father of Stacy F. Wolfe, '33.

A news story from Alliance dated Nov. 16, reads: "Stricken ill at dinner, Claude Tuttle, 67, for 19 years manual training teacher in the Lakewood schools, died of apoplexy last night at the home of two brothers, Harley A. and Frank H. Tuttle, at Palmyra, near her. Harley, rushing to a nearby store to call a doctor, himself suffered a stroke upon his return and was in a serious condition today." Harley A. Tuttle, a member of the Class of 1910, is

Twelve Chosen for Phi Beta Kappa in the Fall Election

Initiation ceremonies for nine undergraduates were held by the Ohio University chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, Dec. 5, on the mezzanine floor of Alumni Memorial Auditorium. Twelve persons, ten undergraduates and two June graduates, were elected to membership in the honorary scholarship fraternity, but three of them were unable to be present for the initiation.

At a dinner at the Colonial following the initiation ceremonies, Dr. J. A. Hess, head of the department of German at Ohio University, spoke on "Goethe the Voice of German Culture."

Those honored in the fall selections were: Edward V. Turner, Belmont; Robert W. Wagner, Athens; Betty Bryan, Cleveland; Fred L. "Ted" Preston, Athens; Harry Potts, Novelty; Dorothy Mae Smith, Glouster; Clyde H. Jones, Langsville; LeRoy E. Colby, Zanesville; John W. Morgan, Homestead, Pa.; Donald W. Shepherd, Morristown; William P. Cherrington, '33, Gallipolis; and William Shea, '33, Erie, Pa. Alumni members are not chosen until the spring election.

Mr. Shepherd, president of the senior class, was absent from the city on a varsity debate trip. Plans have been made for his initiation, together with that of Mr. Cherrington, who is now attending the University of Michigan Law School, later in December. Mr. Shea, a law student at the University of Pennsylvania, will be initiated for the Ohio University chapter by the Phi Beta Kappa group of the Philadelphia school.

Current officers of the local chapter are Dr. James P. Porter, professor of psychology, president; Albert C. Gubitz, professor of economics, vice-president; Raymer McQuiston, associate professor of English, secretary; and Miss Mabel N. Swanson, instructor in home economics, treasurer.

a retired minister. No further word has been received regarding his condition.

Rev. and Mrs. G. Shannon Walker (Helen Belle Roberts, '19), of Kealakekua, Hawaii, were Homecoming visitors on the campus on Oct. 21. While in this section of the state the Walkers were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Lochary (Clara Henry, '19, 2-yr.), of Pomeroy. Mrs. Walker is a former teacher in the Mid-Pacific Institute, Honolulu. Her husband is minister of the Central Kona Union Church at Kealakekua.
